

As a United States citizen I ask you to please protect my right to privacy and not repeal the NJ law which allows me to be on the "Do Not Call" list. My life has been much more serene, with less anxiety, since telemarketers stopped invading my home on a daily basis. As elected officials, please follow the desires of the majority of the people and maintain the "Do Not Call" list. It is your responsibility to continue this effort initiated by the people and for the people. If I had people showing up on my doorstep the way telemarketers show up on my phone, I'd be calling the police daily; phone calls need a different kind of protection. My phone line is mine and I do not want it trespassed upon by people who are, for the most part, there to take advantage of the elderly and other susceptible members of society. Please keep the "Do Not Call" list in action and do your job of protecting the American people. I could care less about what goes on during Super Bowl commercials, because I don't watch the Super Bowl, but I don't want telemarketers calling my home.
